Genetic Counseling students and faculty give national presentations

– This seems to be an extraordinarily good year for College of Health Professions students whose research presentations have been selected for national conferences. First, we reported on Audiology students, then Dietetics and Nutrition students – and now our Genetic Counseling students are in the limelight. Student presenters are indicated with bold, red type.

Two projects were selected for poster presentations:

- Christine Bruha, The role of the geneticist in the patient-centered medical home. Faculty mentors Lori Williamson Dean, Gene Hallford, and G. Bradley Schaefer
- Lauren Tuttle, Exome sequencing: ordering practices and outcomes at a pediatric institution. Faculty mentors Julie Kaylor, Noelle Danylchuk, Jean Chen and G. Bradley Schaefer.

One project was selected for a platform presentation:

- Jordan Hills, Retrospective assessment of health care supervision in patients with Williams Syndrome and recommendations for advanced cardiovascular imaging. Faculty mentors Yuri Zarate, Ronnie Collins, Tiffany Lepard Tassin, Jean Chen, and Noelle Danylchuk.

Congratulations to the student presenters and the faculty mentors! You make UAMS proud.
